Washington Broadcasters

"The service covers human interest stories well. I like that I can get info I don't hear elsewhere."

"Just wanted to thank you for the great service."

"I like that the stories are about things that affect the lives of citizens."

"Thanks to the Washington News Service, people from widely divergent backgrounds across the state are hearing news about them, for them. WNS fills a gap that the mainstream media created in its hunt for ever-larger markets. Small really is beautiful."

Darrin Gunkel, WNS Journalist

"The WNS routinely gets news about children's issues into media markets across the state. This broad distribution ensures that statewide issues have a statewide audience. That alone is invaluable."

Jon Gould, Children's Alliance

"The pressures facing journalists and non-profits today make it challenging, if not impossible, for the public to get the kind of information they need from non-corporate sources to make informed choices. WNS reverses the trend and helps balance the debate on mainstream media. It's a great way for working people to hear more about the issues that affect their daily life."
